Shoppi Tivoli Zurich

The redevelopment of Switzerland's biggest shopping mall began in 1996, conceived and initiated by A&A Real Estate, and was completed in 2013, when A&A Real Estate's stake was sold to Credit Suisse Real Estate Funds.

Alongside the shopping areas at Zurich Airport and those at Zurich's main railroad station, Shoppi Tivoli is one of Switzerland's largest retail properties and is currently worth far in excess of one billion Swiss francs. The stake owned by A&A Real Estate was worth CHF 240 million.

Shoppi Tivoli is situated on both sides of the Zurich–Bern state highway, on the axis running from the economic to the political center of Switzerland. Both sides – originally the Shoppi and the Tivoli – were linked by a shopping bridge in 2006, which, with the addition of a beautiful glass dome, became a landmark.

The architect of the newly built bridge and the redeveloped Tivoli was the Milan-based designer and architect Matteo Thun, who has a considerable reputation in the field of shopping mall design thanks to his experience in the area of product design.
